

Life-Course Immunisation for Older Adults in Asia:

A Health Economics Case

The 'Life-course immunisation for older adults in Asia: A health economics case' is an ideation initiative that encourages understanding on the value of life-course immunisation, especially for the elderly population in Southeast Asia and drives real-world health economics solutions. The initiative is designed to nurture the next generation of healthcare talent to solve the critical gaps in healthcare – in this case, to make the case for increased investment towards life-course immunisation and to propose innovative healthcare financing models that can be utilised to expand immunisation programmes to include the elderly population.
